- FINALIST FOR THE BC BOOK PRIZE 2018

Set in the Nicola Valley, BC, a First Nations family goes on an outing to forage for herbs and mushrooms. A grandmother passes down her knowledge of plant life and the natural world to her young grandchildren.

NICOLA I. CAMPBELL's books have won many awards, including the TD Book Prize, the Marilyn Baillie Award and the Anskohk Aboriginal Children's Book of the Year. Of Nicola Valley First Nations heritage, she currently lives in British Columbia with her son.

JULIE FLETT's books and illustrations have also won many prestigious prizes including the BC Book Prize and the Aboriginal Literature Award. Of Cree-Métis heritage, she lives in Vancouver, BC.

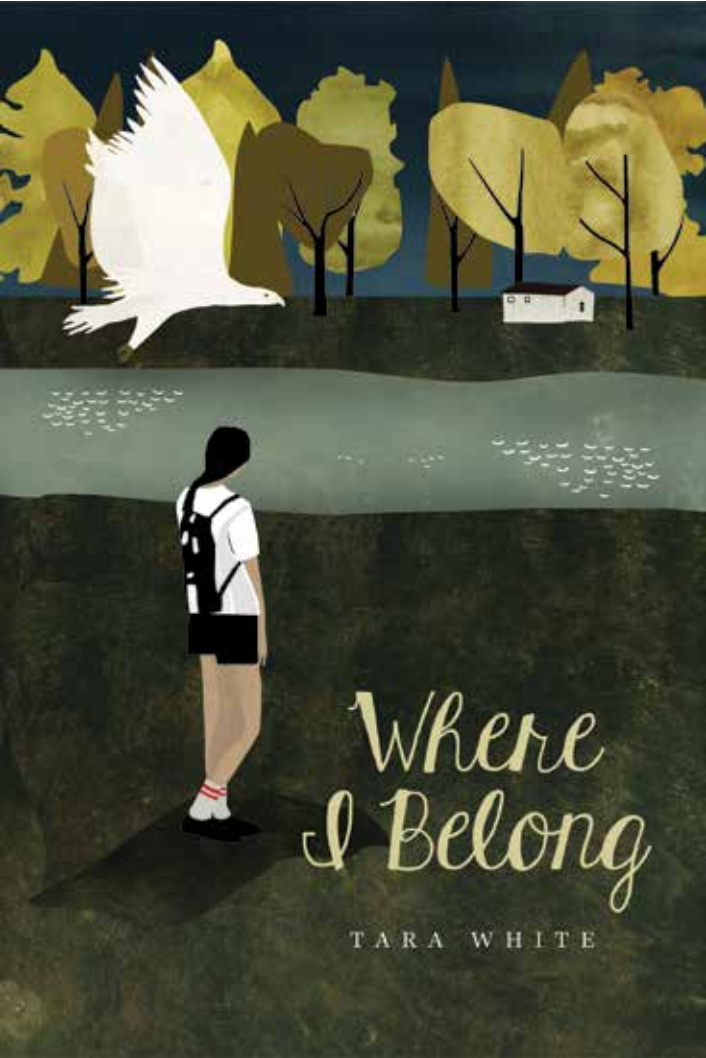

"By using a story about family and nature as a conduit to share Nle'kepmxcin, Campbell nimbly proves how the way we speak is intertwined with the rest of one's life, and why it is essential to preserve Indigenous languages with a new generation."
 —THE GLOBE & MAIL

"Campbell and Flett present the power of practicing Indigenous traditions and family values – for shaping strong, patient, smart, and loving characteristics in children. . . The distinct and unbreakable resiliency of Indigenous people is affirmed in this loving portrait of generational courage and fortitude."
 —QUILL & QUIRE

"Flett's lovely collages add beauty (to) this cheerful story of a spring-day outing . . . Timeless values, such as gratitude for the earth, are seamlessly integrated."
 —BOOKLIST REVIEWS

"This is probably the most beautiful "didactic" book I've ever encountered—grounded in solid, caring Indigenous family/ community relationships, and in profound respect for children's need to interact closely with things that are worth investigating in their world."

- A CANADIAN CHILDREN'S BOOK CENTRE RECOMMENDATION FOR FAMILY LITERACY DAY
- RECOMMENDED AS A 2015-2016 ABORIGINAL TITLE FOR ADULTS AND YOUNG ADULTS BY FIRST NATIONS COMMUNITY READS

This moving novel of self-discovery takes place during the Oka crisis in the summer of 1990. Adopted as an infant, Carrie has always felt somehow out of place, and recurring dreams haunt her. When she finds out that her birth father is Mohawk, living in Kahnawake, Quebec, she makes the journey and finally achieves a sense of home and belonging, which previously eluded her.

TARA WHITE is a Mohawk woman from Kahnawake, Quebec. She has always dreamed of being a writer. Her first book, I Like Who I Am, was published in 2008. Tara currently resides in Bowmanville, Ontario.

"A gorgeous, sorrowful and yet hopeful novel...Written mindfully and delicately in the voice of an early master, Tara White's second book is both a coming-of-age story and a story that desperately needs to be told. Combining a teenage, punk-rock need for acknowledgment and a nationwide need for attention, Where I Belong is a book that feels urgent and human."
 —THE GLOBE AND MAIL

"White shares traditions and teachings without glamorizing Native culture. Ultimately, Carrie must learn to exist in both worlds...A welcome addition to any library, featuring a strong Native protagonist to whom most teens will easily relate."

Thirteen-year-old Yen and her family have survived the ravages of the Vietnam War and the ensuing famine and persecution. After a flood destroys their village, her family decides to take the ultimate risk on the high seas for a chance at a better life.

Nhung N. Tran Davies is a physician and works as an advocate for social justice through education. Her family came to Canada as refugees from Vietnam when she was a young child. Nhung and her family live just outside Edmonton, Alberta.

"A Grain of Rice is a sobering read, which gives insight into the events that still haunt Canada's Vietnamese population – and the struggles of refugees past and present."

—QUILL & QUIRE

"Debut author Tran-Davies does not shy away from the terrible realities of postwar Vietnam, including poverty, corruption, and violence."

—KIRKUS REVIEWS

"Debut author Nhun Tran-Davies immerses the reader in this deeply moving fictionalized account of her family's escape from Vietnam following the fall of Saigon. Highly Recommended."

- WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY KAMBALE MUSAVULI, SPOKESPERSON, FRIENDS OF THE CONGO, WASHINGTON, DC

Liliane Leila Juma was 16 years old when her family home in the Democratic Republic of the Congo was destroyed by rebel soldiers. In this gut-wrenching memoir, she gives an account of her life before and after her family was torn apart by the twin nightmares of civil war and invasion. Sincere and revealing, it gives a moving account of a young girl's journey from a protected and secure family life, through a series of brutal conflicts. Maison Rouge is a story of war and unspeakable loss. It is also the story of survival.

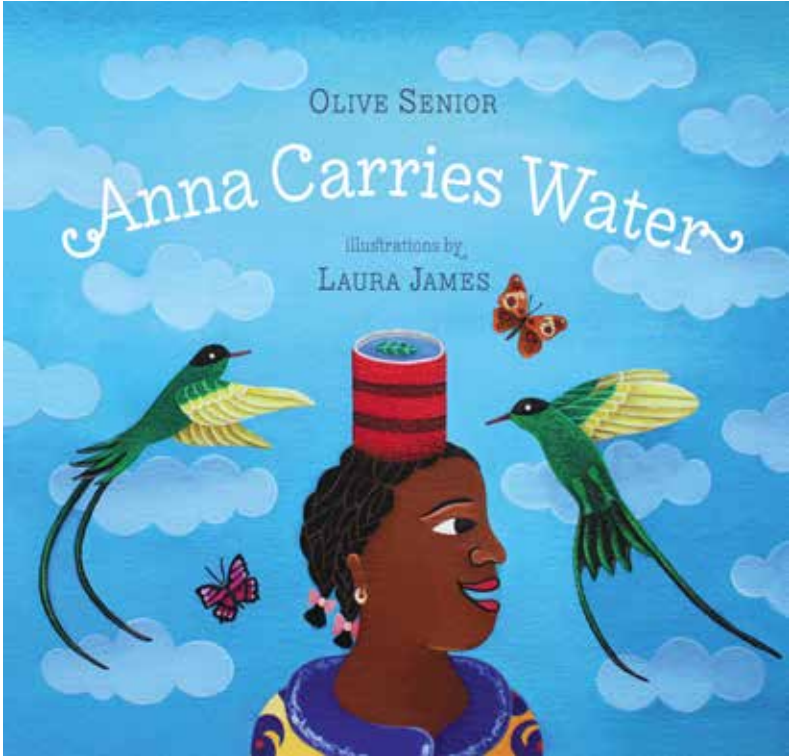

Liliane Leila Juma grew up in Uvira, a city in the western Congo on the shore of Lake Tanganyika near the border with Burundi. Her life as a young girl was brutally disrupted by the wars in Burundi (1993), Rwanda (1994), and the Congo (1994-1997), finally forcing her family to flee to Tanzania. After some time in a refugee protection camp, Leila, her Maman, and her sisters and brothers immigrated to Canada. Leila now lives in Vancouver, where she works as a Women's Support Worker.

"Leolina's experiences, unimaginable to some, feel very vivid and lived . . . (She) uses her voice to navigate conflict and convey hope to others still struggling, while also educating those lucky enough to not have to face the same kind of turmoil."

Sinister things start happening soon after Bing accompanies his father to the graveyard.

"A great read-aloud, either at home or in the classroom."

—STARRED REVIEW THE TORONTO STAR

"The story also offers young readers a glimpse into the racism and tough conditions faced by Chinese immigrants at the turn of the century."

—KIRKUS REVIEWS

"Yee skillfully contrasts the supernatural with brutal, racial prejudice and the haunted, unsettled yearning of immigrants longing for roots."

—BOOKLIST

"This is a book that shows the imaginative power of fiction. It demonstrates that empathy across time and cultures is possible."

Jackson Leong is haunted by ghosts—that of his brother and that of a mysterious young woman. The story is set after the earthquake of 1906 destroys most of San Francisco's Chinatown. The Secret Keepers provides a window into Chinese culture by Governor General's Award-winning author, Paul Yee.

"The story is well-stocked with specters and misadventures."

—KIRKUS

"Set in the rich landscape of San Francisco's Chinatown in the early 1900s, the history and diverse culture of the Chinese-American population are vividly brought to life. The characters are complex, believable, and multi-layered and refuse to paint a stereotype of Chinese-Americans . . . Yee has created another rich North American/Chinese ghost story to thrill his readers."—RESOURCE LINKS

"Readers of mystery books will enjoy the ghosts and supernatural elements in this story. Jackson overcomes adversity, keeps his family from disgrace, and becomes a capable and admirable young man by the end of the novel. Highly recommended."—CM MAGAZINE

"The Secret Keepers is a treasure chest of excellent historical fiction. In the foreground, life-like characters wrestle with the same survival problems today's readers might face; in the background, an uncompromised, perfect portrayal of the past . . . San Francisco's Chinatown at the time of the great earthquake."—CANADIAN CHILDREN'S BOOK NEWS

"Paul Yee presents a tension-laden turn-of-the-century story of family secrets and cover-up with drama and suspense. With a quickstep pace and unexpected twists, this is a compelling read that will engage all ages."

Written from the points-of-view of four young people living in Johannesburg and its black township, Soweto, this book explores the roots of the 1976 Soweto Uprising.

Introducing young adult readers to a remarkable new literary talent, When Morning Comes combines deeply compelling storytelling with a searing picture of South African society on the eve of the student-led uprising that changed it forever.

A riveting and accomplished debut.
 —STARRED REVIEW PUBLISHER’S WEEKLY ★

“This timely reminder of the power and passion of young people contextualizes current student protests by honoring those of the past . . . Readers who love the fast pace and high stakes of dystopian teen literature should snag this book.”
 —STARRED REVIEW KIRKUS REVIEWS ★

“Arushi Raina’s When Morning Comes is riveting historical fiction . . . its characters are engaging, its description of societal differences and injustice is thought-provoking, and its action sequences are at times heart-stopping...”
